How Lexus programmed a machine to write the world's first AI-scripted ad

Lexus used data on 15 years of award-winning luxury campaigns, as well as information about the brand and human emotion to create a 60-second film that tells the story of a car that comes to life and will inevitably lead to questions about whether artificial intelligence can do the same creative job as humans.

Marketing in a Changing World

Marketing

- The process of creating value for customers and building relationships with those customers in order to capture value back from them

Cause-related marketing

- ↳ Identification and marketing of a social issue, cause, or idea to selected target markets

The Role of Marketing in Society

Needs

- Differences between a person's actual state and his or her ideal state; they provide the basic motivation to make a purchase

Wants

- Specific goods, services, experiences, or other entities that are desirable in light of a person's experiences, culture, and personality

Exchange process

- The act of obtaining a desired object or service from another party by offering something of value in return

Transaction

- An exchange of value between parties

Utility

- The power of a good or service to satisfy a human need
- Form, time, place, possession

The Selling Concept

The Marketing Concept

The Selling VS Marketing Concepts

“The aim of marketing is to make selling unnecessary.”

Peter Drucker

Marketing concept

An approach to business management that stresses customer needs and wants, seeks long-term profitability, and integrates marketing with other functional units within the organization

Relationship marketing A focus on developing and maintaining long-term relationships with customers, suppliers, and distribution partners for mutual benefit

Customer loyalty The degree to which customers continue to buy from a particular retailer or buy the products of a particular manufacturer or service provider

The Marketing Process

Understanding Today's Customers

- Consumer market
  - Individuals or households that buy goods and services for personal use
- Organizational market
  - Companies, government agencies, and other organizations that buy goods and services either to resell or to use in the creation of their own goods and services

Marketing research

The collection and analysis of information for making marketing decisions

Observation, surveys, interviews, focus groups

Exhibit 13.3 Marketing Research Techniques

Technique	Examples
Observation	Any in-person, mechanical, or electronic technique that monitors and records behavior, including website usage tracking and monitoring of blogs and social networking websites.
Surveys	Data collection efforts that measure responses from a representative subset of a larger group of people; can be conducted in person (when people with clipboards stop you in a mall, that's called a mall intercept ), over the phone, by mail or email, or online. Designing and conducting a meaningful survey requires thorough knowledge of statistical techniques such as sampling to ensure valid results that truly represent the larger group. For this reason, many of the simple surveys that you see online these days do not produce statistically valid results.
Interviews and focus groups	One-on-one or group discussions that try to probe deeper into issues than a survey typically does. Focus groups involve a small number of people guided by a facilitator while being observed or recorded by researchers. Unlike surveys, interviews and focus groups are not designed to collect statistics that represent a larger group; their real value is in uncovering issues that might require further study.
Process data collection	Any method of collecting data during the course of other business tasks, including warranty registration cards, sales transaction records, gift and loyalty program card usage, and customer service interactions.
Experiments	Controlled scenarios in which researchers adjust one or more variables to measure the effect these changes have on customer behavior. For instance, separate groups of consumers can be exposed to different ads to see which ad is most effective. Test marketing , the launch of a product under real-world conditions but on a limited scale (such as in a single city), is a form of experimental research.
Ethnographic research	A branch of anthropology that studies people in their daily lives to learn about their needs, wants, and behaviors in real-life settings.
Neuromarketing studies	Research that measures brain activity while customers are viewing or interacting with products, websites, or other elements.
