

All people are of equal worth and should be treated the same regardless. In society, people should not be discriminated against. In situations in society such as school, preschool, work, free time, you should not be discriminated against. We all lose by discriminating against people. It results in these people not feeling well and unable to perform at their highest ability. This causes us to lose manpower who, instead of contributing to society, society has to help these people when they are not well. Laws would need to be implemented in society that protect these people and make it harder for others to discriminate against them. For example, employers who do not accept LGBTQ people as employees should be punished by fines. You can also make education about the LGBTQ community mandatory in school to make people less restricted and more educated about the topic.

Emma Albertsson, 6504930204