

Should educational system in Thailand be like the competition to gain the most efficiency or should the educational system in Thailand be equal in all every area and have the same standard in Thailand?

To answer this question, let take the view on the statement that “Should educational system in Thailand be like the competition to gain the most efficiency” by this we could see the nowadays student in Thailand have won the Olympic competition in many fields for several years and this could reflect the ability of the student that can complete with other. With these it could be the result from their parent which supported and take care their children like planned the hour of sleeping to their children, planned on their food, take care of their homework and even drive them to school. Moreover, on the holiday or summer parent also take their children to have the extra tutorial class. By these it could make student ready for the Olympic competition or other completion or even competition to get in the famous school.

Many famous schools also use the competition method to gain the most efficiency to select student in the way that many famous schools set the entrance examine that let the student complete with each other with the score and finally the school would be able to select the potential student that match their criteria. for the potential student, school can easily pull the student potential which could make the student be able to complete in other competition like Olympic competition and if they win the competition the school can also get the reputation as well as being able to get in the high rank of the university. In addition, as there are a lot competition with many school so many schools try to come up with the new and variety program like English program or International program which these program can make student have a variety choice to choose to match their interest With these effort in the long run, it could make student to become a potential adult and get the quality job with a high salary in labor market.

According to this, we could view the educational system as a concept of capitalism by Adam Smit which he shows that competition could also lead to the most efficiency and in this case, it is true in the way that right now there are a lot of competition in educational market which make many schools have to provide a lot of quality option on education program that could match to the student interest and make student have more freedom to choose what they like to learn like English program, International program, mini program , and etc. Moreover, when there is a competition among the student and the student with the highest score he or she may not have to pay for their educational fee and if he or she can get the highest score in every year they probably don't have to pay for the educational fee at all. So, this could make many students try to improve their educational skill and being able to complete with other. By this we could imply that competition in education could be very important it makes the student to work hard and push themselves in the efficiency way in order to have a good future or have a good work. In contrast, if there is no competition in educational system and education are equal to everyone the student may be lazy and do not want to push themselves also the school may not provide the variety of choice on educational program due to the fact that as the educational are equal school gain just the same income so why do school need to provide some addition programs for these student. So, this is the argument of Should educational system in Thailand be like the competition to gain the most efficiency.

And now let take a look in term of should the educational system in Thailand be equal in all every area and have the same standard in Thailand? By this we will see that the educational system is the basic human right that everyone should have. If everyone in the country have all the standard of knowledge, they will use this knowledge and get the job and even more they could make the country grow faster because everyone has the ability to think and solve the problem. To make this happen, government must pay a big role to improve the standard of educational system in Thailand like in the case of Finland that the best school is the school that near student house which the student no need to wake up early in the morning and spend one or two hour on the traffic to be able to get into the famous school in the city. So, if we can improve the education like in the case of Finland it could reduce the competitiveness of the student which the competitive could lead to the effectiveness but it also make student stress and it does not care the one that lose from this competition the one that lose does not mean they have no potential it just because they are not ready for it. By this the competition system may make student have most effective but there also create some group of people that left behind in this situation. In long run, in order to make the country develop it require the potential of the student that one day they can become the adult and have ability to improve the country but if some competition left some group of people behind how could the country could potentially develop.

Moreover, to argue the competition could lead to the best in student, but remember that in every society there is also an income gap that separate the high-income people, middle-income people and low-income people. for high and middle income people they have ability to access to the high quality of education like in the case of school that provide the various types of program that give the opportunity to the student to choose to learn like in English program or in international program but these come with the high level of payment that make low-income student have no opportunity to be able to get in this level of education. So, if we could make the education level to be high and available to every level of people there would be no one left behind. And this could explain in term of Rawlsian in the way that he impose the concept of veil of ignorance that we should first start to forget about our identity and other identity and in this case let think that if you are low income people and you see your friend's kid are being able to receive a better education due to the competitiveness of education market that make school provide various program and you could not effort your kid to study in this high level of education because of income constraint. So, what will you do or how would you feel. So, this is the argument of Should the educational system in Thailand be equal in all every area and have the same standard in Thailand?

According to these two arguments, in my opinion, I would prefer the argument of should the educational system in Thailand be equal in all every area and have the same standard in Thailand? because for me people should have equal in level of education with the high standard level of education with less competitiveness as possible because competitiveness may be good for some group of people but it also left some group of people behind. And for me the level of happiness is also matter meaning that the competition may give the high stress level because student always have to push themselves all the time to be able to complete with other. In addition to see clearly picture, let compare the educational system in Thailand which is like the capitalism and in Finland which education is equal to all over the country. For the measurement and evaluation of the student, in Thailand there are the central exam to measure the potential of the student like O-net, Gat-Pat, and T-Cas and it makes high in competition which make student get stress and to know the evaluation the grade is matter in the way that Thailand separate the student into four level if you get GPA 4 you are a the best student but if you get 1 GPA you are not good student while in Finland there is no central exam to measure the potential of student because they believe that in every school there is the specific goal and objective to provide the best education level to the student so no need to have the central exam like in the case of Thailand and for the evaluation level in Finland, there is no GPA to evaluate they just use the development of children and completion of the course as indicators to evaluate the student. They see that learning is the individual development not the competition so there is no GPA. And for the teaching characteristic, in Thailand the hour of study is around 7-8 hour per day which mostly on the math and science while Finland study visual arts, crafts, music, language and literature more than science and mathematics and that make student know what they like and be happier than the case in Thailand.

by these, we will see that the student in competition system perform less performance than the student equal system for example in the world economic forum in 2015-2016, there was the ranking of education which Finland come up the 8 ranked out of 140 countries while Thailand is only ranked 32 out of 140 countries so this could imply that equal system is efficiency than the competitive system. In addition, talking about equal system does not mean that every school have to provide the exactly the same education to the student but it means that at every class of people like high income, middle income, and low income should be able to access the high quality of education equally and no one would be left behind unlike in the case of competition that there are winner but there are also the loser that would be left behind in the market. By this, this is the reason why I prefer equal system in education rather than competitive system.

Reference

เปรียบเทียบการศึกษาไทยกับฟินแลนด์. (n.d.). Retrieved August 27, 2020, from <https://prezi.com/voy-e9l4cl3n/presentation/>

Bangkokbiznews. (2020, June 18). จะปฏิรูปการเรียนรู้อันอย่างไร เด็กไทยจึงจะเท่าทันโลก. Retrieved August 27, 2020, from https://www.bangkokbiznews.com/news/detail/2152?utm_source=category

ทำไมต้องเรียนโรงเรียนแพง? (2017, June 22). Retrieved August 27, 2020, from <https://www.longtunman.com/1093>

Ram. (2019, April 18). หัวอกพ่อแม่ "เสียลูกเรียนกวดวิชา" ...ออกจากงาน เสียเวลา เสียรายได้ เท่าไหร่ก็ยอม. Retrieved August 27, 2020, from <https://thaipublica.org/2019/04/tutor-student-thailand/>