

“How a China-Built Dam Destroyed an Ecosystem and Livelihoods”

According to the article, many lives, jobs, and fish supplies are gone because of the Lower Season 2 dam. People are suffering and struggling to fish and harvest their crops. Many housing, habitat, and agriculture are washed away. Someone has to be responsible for all of this.

The main cause of these human made problems come from the Chinese building this dam to generate hydroelectric power but the advantageous weight with the effects are not worth it. The old villages are flooded and many houses are destroyed by the water. This forces people to leave their own house and immigrants. Many people refused to migrate because those lands came from their ancestors. Government tried to compensate people in that territory but the prefabricated houses are not enough. People need the new skills to live instead of fishing to generate income and find food to eat. These people are poor but self sustainable so if they have a new sustainable way of living, they will be fine.

Chinese have to care about the villager more because they live their for a long time already. Government have to compensate for the villager much enough to make they self sustained. No
