

French Revolution “The Death of Marat”

1. David, a virtue and influential painter in the neoclassical style, has been well-known in the French period. But unfortunately by 7, his father was killed in the pistol duel, this set him heart-broken. He was later sent to his uncle, who wanted him to become architect, but David with a strong passion in art, his uncle sent him to his mother cousin, who was a famous painter at the time. David was a main supporter of Marat, a leader of French Revolution, but after Marat deceased a new leader, Robespierre, took the position. Marat eventually offered David to draw a picture of his death, which is known as “The Death of Marat”. Not very long, Robespierre was executed and David was imprisoned. He tried to convinced people of his innocence but no one believed, until his painting of his childhood which displayed his innocence mind was painted on the wall. After David death, the government eventually refused to give him a funeral due to his crime, “The Death of Marat” painting.
2. Marat is a politician and famous writer during the French Revolution period. After Louis XVI was assassinated, he was in charge of the duty. After his position as a dictator, he was always careful of the surrounding environment.
3. Coray killed Marat since she was that Marat action could lead to a war in the country, and this would eventually harmed thousand of innocence.
4. The painting of Marat is considered a very beautiful painting. It furthermore represent the Marat as victim of Coray, but eventually Marat has killed over thousands of people.

5. Some people might say that beauty is physical, but eventually real beauty could only be conquered through your heart. Everything has an impact through feeling of each and everyone.